

The Green Castle

The Green Castle with its great garden is the only house, or perhaps one should say home, to stand on solid ground in the centre of the little town. The rest are apartments in multi-storey concrete blocks. Old Thomas's last wish is that his Green Castle should be turned into a park for the children of the town. But his grasping relatives have other ideas.

Stathis and Lakis, old Thomas's young friends, dare to stand up to the power of money. With the help of the other children in the town they take on the old man's relations. The young French woman Sylvia, Andreas the journalist, George the lawyer, Nikos the agricultural expert and other 'important' persons stand by the children in their fight to save the Green Castle. They will succeed.
