Dear Friend & Colleague,

I must apologise for leaving your letter so long unanswered. I have been away in the country & found it awaiting me on my return. It was indeed a pity that we could not meet in Paris but I expect you will be making another trip to France. Let me know at time.

My book Ends of the World was not really about Paris in the 1930s. I arrived there ^{forwards} ~~at~~ the end of that decade I was too young - I even more, too shy to participate much in literary life. I did come to know Henry Miller, Lawrence Durrell & their set & have written about them in various collections (There is a longish essay in Hommage to Lawrence Durrell, but I don't seem to have a copy. As for Ends of the World, which does start with my first discoveries of Paris - B brutally interrupted by the outbreak of war - I have only 2 copies here. I think you will find it in the British Council library in, I think Nicosia.

I have delightful memories of our congress in Lyon. Will you be coming to ^{the} next one? I don't know where it will be held.
Please remember me to your wife. I hope we will all meet again one of these days - Cecily Mackworth
